BIRTH OF A NATION RETURNS TO NEWBERRY

After a sensational tour of the country following its record breaking engagement here, D. W. Griffith's "The Birth of a Nation" returns here at the opera house for an engagement of two days beginning Wednesday, December 26, matinees daily.

The presentation of the great spectacle is identically in every respect, the same that appeared here previously with the same large symphony orchestra. As before there will be daily matinees after the opening performance.

For "The Birth of a Nation" Mr. Griffith took as the skeleton Thomas Dixon's story of "The Clansman" but he had in mind a far vaster conception than Dixon's. It was his aim to produce an epoch in American history so vividly that the spectators would be actually carried out of the present and live for three hours in a past that is fast becoming remote and hazy. He did not make the mistake of desiring to depict the period of the past in a naked and horrid realism. He was determined from the start to throw about it a glamor of romance that would soften the picture without distorting it.

The epoch chosen by Mr. Griffith is the most thrilling in American history. It was the epoch that shattered the old idea of state sovereignty. Griffith blended history and romance with rare genius. The story is so strikingly and thrillingly told that the audiences applaud the big moments with all the vigor that they use when real actors appear upon the stage. He has animated his screen phantoms by means of realistic effects and with a musical score made themes in such a manner that the spoken word is not missed.

Among the gigantic scenes of "The Birth of a Nation" are those of the battle of Petersburg, fought by 18,000 men on a field five miles across; the assassination of President Lincoln in the crowded Ford's theater, the wild rides of the Ku Klux Klan and the session of the South Carolina legislature under the negro carpetbagger.

M Stands for mules these days more than ever before in the history of Newberry county—mules and money. Right now it stands in connection with mules for McCullough also. See J. H. McCullough for mules. Letting the comedies be mentioned, "The Fighting Trail" in the 11th episode at the opera house will draw the usual big crowds. I am now about to stage the greatest spectacle you boys have ever seen," said Von Bleck in this "peached trail" episode. "Crater Ike sits in a cup of rock on the mountain top. I am going to break the cup." He watched the effect of this announcement "When it breaks," he continued, "the water will rush down the gorge and the dam you built will turn the flood into Shaft C of the mine. Every gallery will be full of water in ten minutes after the explosion occurs. Now do you understand?" See this thrilling episode and understand it for yourself.
